REFLECTION

The first part of today's gospel deals with the disciples' jealousy at someone else 'cashing in' on Jesus' name and authority. It is a continuation of their limited understanding about the message and ministry of Jesus. They still cling to an idea that Jesus is going to rise up in power against the forces of Rome and, in the aftermath, they are going to be sitting pretty as associates of this powerful figure. The disciples have been blinded by their dreams of glory and forgotten that the real story is that people are being cured and having demons cast out. Rather than celebrating the healing that is occurring in Jesus' name, the disciples are jealous that it's someone else who is getting the credit. Jesus assures them, and us, that any good work being undertaken genuinely in his name is to be welcomed. It is a reminder to us that sometimes we look down on the work of others because 'they're not one of us', or 'they're not doing it our way'. The second portion of the gospel is one of the really challenging teachings of Jesus. Drawing on the image of the community as being a whole body, the teaching suggests that it is better to remove the part of the body/community that is causing sinfulness than have the whole body/community perish. It is a concept we are familiar with in modern medicine: sometimes it is necessary to remove diseased tissue to prevent the spread of disease. We are reminded that if we surround ourselves with negative people and negative influences, we too will become negative. If we separate ourselves from negative influences and surround ourselves with positive ones then the positive aspects of our lives will flourish.

CHILDREN'S LITURGY OF THE WORD: CLOW

"Welcoming others" was our message last Sunday. We discussed how welcoming others is a very important part of being a Christian because as Jesus explained in the gospel reading, "when we welcome others we are welcoming Him, and by welcoming Jesus, we are welcoming the Father."

The children had great suggestions about ways we can be welcoming – giving a smile, including the new person at school in your games, taking a cake over to the new neighbour, just be kind and respectful.

Check out the back wall of the Church for the "WELCOME" heart craft the children did to give out to people in a few weeks time!
